The heart of every true citizen will thrill at "North of 36," a spectacular, epic motion picture of the golden gold fields of the Texas cattle ranges. A romance of the pioneers and the terror and bravery of the Texas cattle trail. A glorious girl of the West is the first to lead the range to the east, to lead the range to the west. "North of 36" just as "The Covered Wagon" is a story of the linking of the East and West, so is "North of 36" an epic of the North and South.

Hardy pioneers battled their way westward to open a new country, so the early cattle men of Texas struggled northward with their great herds to open a new market.

There were many great "North of 36" coming to the Rex theater November 20-21.

"North of 36" Pictures Thrills of Pioneer Days

The journey of Columbus across the Atlantic in 1492 required no more courage than the trip made by the pioneers of the south in their attempt to establish a new home in Texas and the railroads in Kansas.

The first caravan traveling from the Gulf of Mexico to northern United States faced fearful cold nights, blizzards, blizzards, floods, fire, wild animals and many obstacles described in Emerson Hough's historical novel, "North of 36," which Irvin Willat produced in picture form for Paramount.

Like Columbus, the first caravan had no guide save the compass and stars. Nobody had ever been over the trail before. There had not even been a legend to tell the tale. What happened, nobody ever knew.

In "North of 36," the first journey from the south to the north is told upon the screen scene by scene as it actually occurred sixty-one years ago. Nothing has been left out, nothing added. The true story of the hardships and suffering of the brave hardy men so willing that they made no sacrifice to achieve the supreme in drama.

Prominent in the cast of "North of 36" are Jack Holt, Ernest Torrence, Lois Wilson, the covered Wagon girl and Noah Beery.

The picture comes to the Rex theater on Friday and Saturday, November 20-21.

Voting

Throughout Canada on October 29 the question, "Have you voted yet?" will be asked not once but thousands of times. What the questioner will mean, of course, is, have you exercised your franchise? That is the superfical meaning, but is there not a much deeper, more significant meaning? Do you really "vote," or—just mark a ballot paper? There is a vast difference between the two.

Admittedly it is a duty every elector owes his country to exercise his franchise when called upon to do so. It is just as much a duty as paying taxes or obeying the law, even though no penalty is imposed for non-fulfilment of the duty.

Even so, who would be urged to "vote early" and this is good advice, because there are always people who will leave the performance of this duty to the last minute, while circumstances may force others to do so. Everyone who can should, therefore, go to the polls as early as possible on election day. But when marking haste to the polling booth, do not be hasty in your act of voting.

To come back to the original question, are you really going to vote tactfully or haphazardly?

Are you going to vote Conservative, or Liberal, or Progressive because your father or grandfather voted that way, or because some friend or relative is voting, or because the majority of people in your neighbourhood intend to do so? Are you voting for the majority? If so, you are not voting at all, but are marking a ballot paper.

Or are you going to vote for a particular party only because you voted for it on previous occasions and you propose to be "conscientious"? Conscientious to what? A party name? A policy or policies which may have appealed to you yesterday or yourself in years gone by, and which were destined to meet the same voting conditions but which do not necessarily have any force or bearing in 1927?

Perhaps it is your intention to vote for a certain candidate regardless of the party or policy he supports solely because you know him and like him—although you may not know him; you do not like the opposing candidate, candidate.

Again, it may be that you are influenced in your decision as to how you will mark your ballot paper by the welfare of the welfare of Canada as a whole.

It may even be that some people have decided to mark their ballot papers in a certain way, but with no more worthy object in view than to "kill the vote" of somebody else they do not like but who they understand intends to vote.

Not one of these are reasons supporting an intelligent marking of a ballot paper, nor are the others assuming such marking more worthy of a ballot paper than Canadian citizen. Such conduct cannot honestly be dignified as "voting." It is merely ballot paper marking, and so far as Canada is concerned, worse than useless.

Stop and consider. On October 29 you are not voting primarily for a candidate or a party; you are voting for Canada, or ought to be. Parties and candidates are but the means to an end, but it is Canada, its welfare and progress which should be kept constantly in mind and guide the eye and hand when marking a ballot paper in the secret and sacred presence of the polling booth.

True, the candidate before whom you will place a cross is your choice of voter, but in the Parliament of the land you will next year or five years. True, the decisions and rejections of that candidate will have a bearing on the time as to which party will be entrusted with the responsibility of government and of formulating the policies and directing the administration of the Dominion.

True, two hours—the result will not be long enough to call forth the exercise of all your political knowledge, but in one of those moments, impetuous, yes, altogether unworthy, considerations and motives which, unfortunately, are sometimes allowed to sway the feelings of people in times of election excitement.

If you are a shareholder in a large commercial enterprise, holding the shares of a trading company for whom whom you can do otherwise, supporting policies which you were confident would result in increased business success and larger profits, or would you reject such men for some trivial reason or personal prejudice? Then remember October 29 that you are voting for your country, a great Canadian concern, Canada itself, and that you are closing your home to the world.

On election day, really vote, and do not just mark a ballot paper. Instead of hurrying into the polling booth and hastily scribbling a cross opposite a name, stop with pencil poised and ask yourself: What is the best service I can render my country today? Then VOTE as your judgment and conscience dictates. This is the essence of good citizenship.

The great man doesn't think great thoughts, he just thinks fewer small ones.

The Soviet Government of Siberia, at Chita, purchased 100,000 bushels of wheat and large quantities of flour with flour mill machinery for 10,000,000 bushels of Canadian wheat, to go out via Pacific port.

Besides this wheat for Chita, the Orient has booked 5,000,000 bushels of wheat and flour mill machinery for 10,000,000 bushels of Canadian wheat, to go out via Pacific port.

Claims Dominion Has Greatest Opportunity

Editor of London Paper Advises Canada To Pick Best Immigrants

"Canada has the greatest opportunity of any country on the face of the earth," stated J. St. Loo Strachan, editor and proprietor of the London Spectator, in the course of a recent address to masters of the Canadian bar.

"A great part of the world wants to pour into Canada," he declared, referring to the bulging up of the country by immigrants.

Conditions in Great Britain were satisfactory, and he wished to impress this emphatically on the people of Canada. "High taxation has awakened us from a period of indifference and somnolence."

NERVOUS DEPRESSION

Why People are Low Spirited and Depressed

Nearly all people and men must suffer at times from fits of depression and fits of depression are not uncommon; then come periods of nervous irritability, headaches and weariness, insomnia, and depression. This is because their blood is poor and nerves are starved in consequence. The blood is poor because the heart has not enough force to pump it; the heart reaches through the blood. By enlisting the heart will Dr. William Pink Pills the heart pump more rapidly with just the elements they need.

Mrs. J. E. Johnson, 12th Ave., Vancouver, B.C., who says: "About two years ago I was very nervous and nervous. I had pains in my side and back, and also suffered from frequent headaches, especially in the head and neck. I was hardly able to do anything about the house. I would have to go to bed at 10 o'clock and go to sleep at 12 o'clock. One day I read about Dr. William Pink Pills and decided to give them a trial. I found them to be such a beneficial change in a short time that I kept taking them until I was well again. I am now in better health and would rather go to it almost closed my eyes. I tried much doctor's advice, but nothing helped. I am now feeling like a new person and am doing my own housework. I am now taking Dr. William Pink Pills in the house."

The Greatest Problem Facing Farmers of Canada Is That of Combating Wheat Stem Rust

The next big problem facing cerealists in Canada is that of combating wheat stem rust, says Dr. E. Saunders, former Dominion cerealist and one of the leading plant breeders on the continent. "This is a matter of great importance and extreme difficulty, and it is not being adequately met," he says.

The loss from this disease on the prairies is tremendous each year, and there is no method of combating it by chemicals or by cultivation. The only way to overcome the difficulty, he says, is to grow a new variety of wheat, which would have the same time has characteristics of high yield, early maturity and drought resistance.

Dr. Saunders pointed out that there are seventeen kinds of stem rust on the prairies. They are found in different areas, though, and a district may be attacked by several varieties of rust. To fully study the disease, and to originate rust-resisting varieties of wheat, it is necessary that many experiments be carried on and that the three prairie provinces. Only by the expenditure of a vast sum of money would the desired results be obtained.

The leading cerealist is best known as the originator of Marquis wheat which is so popular on the prairies that more than eighty-five per cent of the wheat there is of this variety. Dr. Saunders also originated the Prentiss and the Marquis wheat which made possible the extension of wheat well beyond several hundred miles further north than it had been before.

The Dominion Government is at present introducing two other varieties, developed by Dr. Saunders. These are known as the R. H. and the Ward. After extensive tests, they have been found to be unusually drought-resistant and particularly well adapted to cultivation in dry areas. These new varieties, which may possess the extension of wheat well beyond several hundred miles further north than it had been before.

In Dr. Saunders, though for twenty years primarily an agriculturist, is a keen student of French literature and also of music. Before he became a cerealist, he taught music, mostly vocal, and has now returned to the realm of art. He resigned his position three years ago, and for more than two years has been studying French literature in Paris.

Producing Clean Milk

Guarding Against All Sources of Contamination in Milking Cess.

A clean pen, a clean stall and a clean penman are the big three to producing clean milk. All other sources of contamination are of lesser importance, states the Dominion agricultural bacteriologist in his report for 1924. To insure clean milk, the milk should be washed and scoured, and, if possible, treated with steam, and care taken to have no dirt fall from the teats into the milk. The report, which is distributed free by the publications branch, department of agriculture, Ottawa, describes in detail the methods of insuring complete cleanliness. Milkmen should be educated to the fact that the cows should be carefully washed, and the forelimbs should be disinfected.

Oil Pollutes Sea

Fishermen, it is said, declare that the decline in the productivity of many sea fishing grounds is due to the discharge of oil. Yet in its latest report, the fisheries department states that the oil in the sea does not indicate that oil is actually injurious to fish life of any kind. "Why is it?" It is difficult to say that the pollution of the sea with waste oil does not large numbers of sea birds—London Sunday Postular.

Has Commercial Value

Peanuts Now Used in Production of Milk Foods

The peanut is rapidly becoming an article of the greatest commercial value. Already it is being used in the production of 165 foods and utensils.

From the peanut we obtain peanut butter, ten varieties of milk, five kinds of baked food, two grades of flour, ice cream, salad oil, sauce, metal pots, toiles, toilet and laundry soaps, oleomargarine, sweet, studly, feather, dyes, ink and glycerine.

A teaspoonful of peanuts can be made into a pint of milk while the nuts make a better hard substance than does any nut. It is what is called "nut butter."

The peanuts grow underground, and the crop is harvested with a plow.

There being special machines which clean and bunch the nuts.

Japan Buys More Canadian Wheat

British Journalists Impressed

Trip Across Canada Was One of Great Interest

At the conclusion of their tour through Canada from the Atlantic to the Pacific as the guests of E. W. P. T. Stant, president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, a party of British journalists gave statements to the press just before sailing for England at the end of September summarizing their impressions of Canada. It is evident from these statements that each editor has been very favorably impressed with what he saw in the Dominion, and the good opportunities there are for prospective investors.

A conference of representative Liberals of the Claresholm provincial constituency will be held on Tuesday afternoon to discuss the matter of calling a Liberal convention to nominate a candidate for the forthcoming by-election to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of T. C. Milnes. The meeting was presided over by Norman Holmes of Claresholm, and R. W. Jell of Granum was appointed secretary. Hon. C. R. Mitchell, provincial Liberal leader, was present and briefly outlined the provincial situation. After thorough discussion of the whole situation, it was unanimously decided to call a Liberal convention for this constituency, to be held in the Odd Fellow's Hall, Claresholm, on Thursday afternoon, November 19, at 2 o'clock.

ORDER OF ELKS

Tony McKinley, grand organizer for the B. P. O. Elks, has returned to Claresholm and will resume organization work here.

A lodge of one hundred members has just been installed at Van Es. Mr. McKinley expects that the Claresholm will start out with at least that number enrolled.

The date of initiation will be announced at a meeting to be held on Saturday, November 18. Tony also answers a few questions that are asked about the order, and tells something of its objects.

The question is sometimes asked, "How much will it cost each year to be an Elk?" Some are under the impression that members are frequently assessed, for the purpose of "putting over" various community work propositions. The answer to this question is "One dollar per month." This amount is quite ample to conduct the affairs of the lodge and then some. The Great Order of the Elks, however, has in mind the fact, that the membership is made up very largely of men of moderate means who are nevertheless most anxious to contribute their bit, in the way of work and money, to the increasing number of community service enterprises, whether they be local, provincial or national character. The great community enterprises such as the Knights and Gyms, are made up of business and professional men of means who are able to "dig down" when occasion demands it, yet the great bulk of the charity channels from these sources are no doubt raised by the united efforts of the club members in putting over various projects.

Men Are Waiting

Everyone, men and especially young men, are waiting for the lead—waiting for the opportunity to "allow in" of "service to others." Many are proven to be excellent leaders when given the opportunity and encouragement. The Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks is endeavoring to give this great army of men the opportunity and the urge, by banding together for a common cause, to do good.

Everywhere, where the order undertakes to plant the seeds of charity, justice, brotherly love, fidelity, patriotism and service, the art, aristocrat and amateur, and professional men who come forward with the lead and the encouragement. In every Alberta town where an Elk organizer has been in each instance one of the first to receive his approval and support by handing his application to the organizer.

The Lighter Vein

The order also seeks through the lodges to give its members an opportunity to have a good time.

The enthusiastic work is clued to a minimum so that those attending meetings may have some time for social intercourse and for some amateurish sports. It helps the kids to think about their work and their play. Show me a true Elk and I will show you a man who loves children and who loves to help them. I can not find a better motto and portray the spirit of Elkdom than to quote the following lines from

J. Alexander Killingsworth, the grand old grand secretary of the order:

It's good to be an Elk, boys!
It's fine to do our share
In helping make life sweeter
For pilgrims ev'rywhere.
It's good to be an Elk, boys!
To give our service free;
For "Service" is our watchword
Wherever we may be.

It's good to be an Elk, boys!
Because it means that we
Can find our best enjoyment
In helping cheerfully.

It's good to be an Elk, boys!
Because the Lord's command
That man should love his neighbor
Help mankind in kind.

It's good to be an Elk, boys!
Because we understand
That others, too, have burdens
And can lend a hand.

It's good to be an Elk, boys!
Because the children say
The Elk are friends of theirs and
For these good men they pray.

It's good to be an Elk, boys!
Because we understand
That others, too, have burdens
And can lend a hand.

It's good to be an Elk, boys!
To give us all a thrill
To hear the salvation.

The welcome "Hello, Bill!"
It's good to be an Elk, boys!
For when we're laid away
We'll then b' absent brothers
Till resurrection day.

It's good to be an Elk, boys!
So let us do our part

In planting seeds of kindness
In every human heart.

Would space permit, I would like to supplement this by quoting the wonderful address on Elkdom delivered by Col. Royal B. D. Stott, D. S. O., our Grand Exalted Ruler, recently.

SYNOPSIS

McTaggart, the post trader, finding Bakkie the wolf, trapped and bound in his game store, struck him a blow with a club. Then he bounded him into a trap and carried him to the cabin of Pierrot the trapper. Pierrot went to demand the hand of Neopee, the young, untried daughter. The girl recognized Bakkie and when Pierrot had been injured she turned in anger to McTaggart, barking his teeth in the face. Pieraggart drew his revolver and Neopee raised his hand to his arm.

"Let us leave them to fight it out between themselves, matak?" he said. "They are two little firebrands, and we are no safe. If she is bitten—"

He shrugged his shoulders. A great load had been lifted from them when suddenly the girl with a smile and a snarl. "And now, the anger had gone out of the Willow's face. A coquettish uplift of her eyes caught McTaggart, and she looked straight at him, smiling—then her teeth were set tight. The nails of her fingers were cutting into the rock of her hands.

pool between the rock walls, a pool so deep that it was like blue ink. She turned to face the Factor from Lac Iban. He had never looked more like a tiger, and he had never held this moment she had been unarmed, but now—in an instant—she was terrified. Before she could speak what she had planned to say, he was at her side and had closed her face between his great hands. The fingers were twining in the silken strands of her thick braids where they fell over her shoulders at the neck.

"Kasakhet!" he cried passionately. "I am a man who would have an answer for me. But I have no answer now. You are mine! Mine!"

She gave a cry. It was a gasping, broken cry. His arms were about her like iron, crushing her slender body, clutching her hair, pulling the world almost black for her. She could neither struggle nor cry out. She felt the hot passion of his lips on her face, heard his voice—and then the sharp, metallic snap of a gun into her strangled lungs. Pierrot was calling! He had come to the fork in the trail, and he was calling the Willow's name!

McTaggart's hot hand came over her mouth.

"Don't answer," he heard him say.

Strength—anger—hatred flared up in her, and fiercely she struck the hand down. Something in her wonder eyes lit up McTaggart. They blazed into his very soul.

"Be not!" she panted at him, freeing herself from the last touch of his hands. "Beast—black beast!" Her eyes were set, but the eyes dared up when she saw him. She knew what it was about.

From Lac Iban had been demanding his answer of Pierrot, and Pierrot had been telling him what she had said. He had come here to hear her, and she had been telling him what he had come here to hear. The hand she had been holding over the edge of the chasm, and then she laughed—laughed as she gave him a sudden shove from behind.

"Aha! Aha!" Pierrot said. He turned with a quick beating of the heart and hurried down a little path. She heard McTaggart's footsteps behind her, and then the flash of a knife as he cut her shoulder. But her teeth were set tight. The nails of her fingers were cutting into the rock walls between the rock walls.

CHAPTER XIV.

From the edge of the open Pierrot saw what had happened, and he said a quick "Gasp!" and drew his knife from the bananas. This was not a moment for him to show himself. While his heart beat like a hammer his face was a mask of joy.

On her hands and fingers the Willow was peering over the edge. Bush McTaggart had disappeared. He had gone down like the great cloud he was: the water of her pool had closed over him in a moment, and then a chuckle of triumph. He appeared now, beating out with his arms and legs to keep himself afloat, while the Willow's voice came to him in taunting cries.

"Ho! Ho! Ho! Ho! Ho! Ho! Beast! Beast!"

She flung small sticks and tufts of earth down at him fiercely; and McTaggart, looking up as he gained his balance, was going down so far over that she seemed about to fall. Her long braids hung down into the chasm, gleaming in the sun; her eyes were laughing while her lips taunted him. He could see the flesh of her wrists and hands.

"Bast! Beast!"

He began swimming, still looking up at her. It was a hundred yards down, and he was going down so far over that she seemed about to fall. Her long braids hung down into the chasm, gleaming in the sun; her eyes were laughing while her lips taunted him. He could see the flesh of her wrists and hands.

Biggest Cattle Drive in History in "North of 36"

The final long-horn cattle drive from the bottoms of the world took place recently when the last great herd—over four thousand in number—started from Texas, towards the railroad in Abilene, Kansas.

The journey was made in the historic Emerson Hough novel, "North of 36," an Irvin Willat production for Paramount, coming to the Rex Theater Friday and Saturday evenings, November 21 and 22.

Headed by Louis Williams, Jack Holt, Ernest Torrence, and Noah Beery, who have featured roles in the production, and followed by an army of cowboys, chuck wagon drivers, and a tremendous herd of long-horns swaying out of the big ranch-yard and started across country in the direction of Abilene, Kansas.

The last herd of 4,000 longhorns is the only remaining one in the world, stock men having replaced them with a superior breed of beef.

According to the owner of the cattle, the last herd is the largest of its kind in almost forty years.

It will also be the last.

Almost immediately after "North of 36" was completed he marketed the stock.
